

Title: Jago's Magical Adventure

Once upon a time, in a little farmhouse on a long lane, live a lady and her dog called Lily. Every weekend her grandson would be dropped off by his mother for a sleepover, . Jago loved having sleepovers at his grandma's house, and this weekend was extra special as it was his first one of the summer holidays.

When Jago arrived at grandma's house, he was filled with excitement. He couldn't contain his joy and started running down the path, shouting back to his mother, "Bye mummy, see you tomorrow!" He knocked on grandma's door and eagerly waited for her to greet him.

Grandma opened the door with a warm smile and said, "Hello, Jago! Have you come for a sleepover?" Jago replied, "Yes, please, grandma!" He stepped inside, and there was Lily, grandma's little dog, wagging her tail and jumping around with joy.

That night, Jago and grandma had the best time playing games and laughing together. They were having so much fun that grandma suddenly looked at the clock and exclaimed, "Is that the time? We've had so much fun; I didn't realise it was that late." So, Jago put on his pyjamas, brushed his teeth, and off to bed he went.

The next morning, Jago woke up nice and early. After enjoying his favorite breakfast of pancakes with honey and strawberries, he asked grandma if he could take Lily for a walk. Grandma gave her permission, and little Lily couldn't contain her excitement, wagging her tail in anticipation of their adventure.

Jago put Lily's lead on, and together they set off on their walk down the lane. Not far into their journey, Jago found a special stick. It wasn't just any stick; it looked like an extra-long magic wand, with a metal tip on the end. Jago, began tapping the ground with the stick as he walked.

Suddenly, a voice called out, "Stop that banging!" Jago turned around in surprise, trying to find where the voice was coming from. To his amazement looking down he saw a little hedgehog talking back to him.

"Wow," Jago said "I didn't know hedgehogs could talk!" The hedgehog explained that Jago had found the only magic stick in the world, lost a long time ago by a kind wizard who used to live at the house at the top of the lane.

Jago realised he had to take good care of the magic stick. The hedgehog explained that with the stick, Jago could do magic and talk to all the animals. Jago was thrilled! He asked if he could talk to Lily too, and Lily happily replied, "Yes, I can talk as well!" They continued their walk, now accompanied by the talking hedgehog.

As they walked down the lane, Jago spotted a horse in a nearby field. With newfound confidence, Jago greeted the horse, who greeted him back. Jago couldn't believe it - a talking horse! The horse shared that he was feeling a bit sad as the sunshine had dried up his water bucket. Jago said don't worry and tapped the ground with his magic stick, and magically, the bucket was filled again with water. The horse thanked Jago, and his gratitude warmed Jago's heart.

Further down the lane, Jago spotted a rabbit. The rabbit looked a little down, and Jago asked if everything was okay. The rabbit sadly shared that he couldn't find any carrots. And was so hungry, Jago said don't worry and tapped his magic stick on the ground, and a bucket full of carrots appeared. The rabbit's eyes widened with delight as he tucked into his food, wow, thank you so much!" Jago smiled and said, "You're welcome," before continuing on his magical adventure along the lane.

After a few hours, the hedgehog reminded Jago that it was time to head back home before it got dark.

They turned back up the lane, making their way home. The hedgehog told Jago he'd had the best day ever, Ho thank you mr hedgehog and I hope we can meet up again soon, Well don't forget to take good care of that magic stick "said the hedgehog,"

Ho don't worry "replied Jago"

I will hide this at grandma's house we're no one will find it so, Im able to talk to you and your friends every time I come down the lane,

Well good night mr hedgehog said jago and off he went back home to tell grandma about his amazing adventure with his magic stick,
